

Supplemental Information: Reconstructing the history and demise of the red wolf in Alabama: Insights from examining historical records and cultural perspectives

Jazmin J. Murphy<sup>1</sup> , Amy C. Shutt<sup>2</sup> , Aby Sène-Harper<sup>3</sup> , & Joseph W. Hinton<sup>1</sup>

Accepted by 2 of 2 reviewers

Collaborators: Jenna Parker and Kimberly Rivera

Funding Information

This study was funded by the Wolf Conservation Center.

Conflicts of Interest

The authors declare no conflicts of interest.

Publishing History

Submitted June 19 2024
Accepted May 7 2025
Published July 18 2025

Corresponding Author

Jazmin J. Murphy
sunny@nywolf.org

Open Access

Peer-Reviewed

Creative Commons

<sup>1</sup> Wolf Conservation Center, South Salem, New York, USA

<sup>2</sup> The Canid Project, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, USA

<sup>3</sup> Parks and Conservation Area Management, Clemson University, Clemson,
South Carolina, USA

Supplemental Information

All of the datasets analyzed are available here.

Recommended Citation

Murphy, J. J., Shutt, A. C., Sène-Harpe, A., & Joseph W. Hinton. (2025).
Reconstructing the history and demise of the red wolf in Alabama: Insights from examining historical records and cultural perspectives. Stacks Journal:
25008. <https://doi.org/10.60102/stacks-25008>